THE SIX MAIN UN ORGANS

There are six main organs of the United Nations-the General Assembly, the Security Council, the Trusteeship Council, the Economic and Social Council, International Court of Justice, and the Secretariat. The Court has its seat at The Hague, Netherlands, All other organs are based at United Nations Headquarters in New York. While Headquarters in New York serves as the principal nerve centre of the organization, several important activities are directed from offices located in centres around the world. Meetings and various UN are often held away bodies The Economic and Social Headquarters. Council, for example, rotates its regular annual session between and New York, and special committees of the General Assembly have frequently held meetings in many countries around the world. Conferences on topics such as population, food, the environment and human rights have been held in different parts of the world.

The General Assembly

The General Assembly is the main deliberative organ of the United Nations comprised of all Member States, each of which has one vote, no matter its size or influence. It may discuss any matter arising under the UN Charter, Decisions on international peace and security, admitting new Member States and the UN budget are decided by a two-thirds majority. Other matters are decided by a simple majority. In recent years, a special effort has been made to reach decisions through consensus, rather than a formal vote. General Assembly resolutions are only recommendations to the Member States, but as they represent the majority of the world's view, they carry heavy moral weight and often lead countries to join international agreements treaties, conventions, and protocols, etc., and, ultimately, have a positive influence in the world.

The Assembly's session lasts a year, starting in mid-September; the busy season, during which time most resolutions are adopted, is from September to December. Special sessions may be requested by the Assembly, at the request of the Security Council, or at the request of a majority of UN Members.

At the beginning of each regular session in September, the Assembly holds a two-week general debate at which time heads of State present their views on a wide range of issues of concern to the international community, from war and terrorism to disease and poverty. Each year, the General Assembly elects a president who presides over these meetings as a neutral party that represents the United Nations.

The work of the Assembly is also carried out by its six main committees, the Human Rights Council, other subsidiary bodies and the UN Secretariat. The six main committees of the General Assembly are: First Committee (Disarmament and International Security); Second Committee (Economic and Financial); Third Committee (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural); Fourth Committee (Special Political and Decolonization); Fifth Committee (Administrative and Budgetary); and Sixth Committee (Legal).

The Security Council

The Security Council has a primary responsibility under the UN Charter to maintain international peace and security. Unlike the General Assembly, the Security Council does not hold regular meetings. It can be convened at any time, whenever international peace is threatened. In fact, it meets almost every day.

legally binding. When a threat to peace is brought before the Council, it usually first asks the parties to reach agreement by peaceful means. If fighting breaks out, however, the Council tries to secure a ceasefire through negotiation, the establishment of sanctions, or by authorizing the use of force, carried out by willing Member States. The Council may also decide to establish peacekeeping operations to promote lasting peace.

The Council has 15 members, including 5 permanent members: China, France, the Russian Federation. the United Kingdom, and the United States. At the end of World War II. these five countries played key roles in the establishment of the United Nations. The creators of the UN Charter conceived that they would continue to play important roles in the maintenance of international peace and security. The other 10 rotating members are elected by the General Assembly on the basis of geographical representation for two-year terms.

To pass a resolution in the Security Council, 9 out of the 15 members of the Council must vote "ves", but if any of the 5 permanent members votes "no" - often referred to as a veto - the resolution does not The Council also makes nass. recommendations to the General Assembly on the appointment of a new Secretary-General and admission of new members to the UN. Many countries want to expand the membership of the Council to include new permanent and non-permanent These proposals are members currently being discussed by the Member States of the United Nations.

The Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC)

The Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC) is the central body for coordinating the economic and social work of the United Nations and the UN System. The Council has 54 members which are chosen for equal geographical representation and serve a three-year term. Voting in the Council is by simple majority; each member has one vote.

As much as 70 per cent of the work of the UN system is devoted to promoting higher standards of living, full employment, and conditions of economic and social progress and development. The Council recommends and directs activities aimed at promoting economic growth of developing countries, supporting human rights and fostering world cooperation to fight poverty and under-development.

To meet specific needs, the General Assembly has set up a number of specialized agencies such as the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO), the World Health Organization (WHO) and the UN Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), and programmes such as the UN Development Programme (UNDP), the UN Children's Fund (UNICE!) and the Office of the UN High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR). The work of these agencies and programmes
